

Japanese Gem

in the Land of Oz

New from Fleming's Nurseries is the almost bonsai-like flowering cherry Prunus incisa 'Kojo No Mai'

This attractive shrub or small tree is ideally suited to small gardens or container planting. It offers year round interest with its branches forming a zig-zag pattern. In Spring, pretty red-pink buds burst into dainty white flowers, which are usually produced in pairs. During autumn, the serrated green foliage changes to hues of yellow, orange and red, before once again exposing the twisted branches.

Prunus 'Kojo No Mai' grows best in a well drained, moderately fertile soil, where it receives full sun and once established has some drought tolerance. It requires no pruning to maintain its rounded, compact habit and highly ornamental branch structure.

A wonderful new and unusual shrub or small tree, this pretty flowering cherry would suit patios, courtyards, small gardens and containers, growing to 1.5-2m. Prunus 'Kojo No Mai' would make an ideal gift.

NEW

Fleming's top10
trees

Fleming's
NURSERIES

Full cultural information at www.flemings.com.au
Images are available by contacting media@flemings.com.au or telephone Ian Ritchie (03) 9756 6105

www.flemings.com.au