

Spring (already) and Still Snowing!

For the first time in years Aussie snow skiers have the season they've been waiting for. Mountains of the stuff (pun intended) and just wait for all that wonderful run-off into our rivers and dams when the weather warms and the snows melt. But Spring does not mean it will stop snowing. About school holiday time, beautiful white flowers will smother the branches of Snow Fountains®, Australia's best white weeping cherry.

This superior form of white weeping cherry features masses of long, slender, trailing branches that weep dramatically from the top of the tree, which is by far the narrowest of any weeping cherry. The graceful cascade of white spring flowers creates a glorious impression, making this small weeping tree ideal as a centrepiece for small to medium gardens and is eminently suitable for growing in a container.

Respected third generation nurseryman Wes Fleming says of this tree: 'Snow Fountains is the best weeping cherry I have seen in the world by a long way. It's no accident that this tree has become America's favourite weeping cherry, it's just fantastic'.

In addition to the spring display, Snow Fountains is tolerant of heat and moderate levels of drought, has good autumn tones of gold, orange and red and will flower on young wood, making this tree a stunner from 'day one'. Snow Fountains also has very good resistance to insects and diseases and requires little or no maintenance to exhibit its magnificent weeping form and beauty. It is available as 'short' and 'tall' standards.

Snow Fountains® is one of Fleming's Top 10 Weeping Trees - see them at www.flemings.com.au. And to make sure you get the genuine article, make sure the label says Snow Fountains.
